

If you go to: www.zombieexterminationdivision.com it will take you to Evermore Nevermore's website.

Evermore Nevermore's Z.E.D. Zombie Extermination Division

One of Amanda's Zombie Girl models: Stephanie Henslee

My Dad's old 20 Gauge Shotgun

The NERDVANA wound band representing our thanks for the support from our favorite newspaper column!

We sell Derby Dames roller derby merchandise in our shop and have a relationship with a lot of the girls. This is Ginger Mortis from the championship team, Coffin Draggers, with one of their shirts on. Her roller skates are on the opposite side

One of Amanda's Zombie Girl models: Casey Sponhouse

Zombie Santa's severed arm. We've done Zombie Santa for our Grand Opening, Christmas and for our Halloversary a couple weeks ago. We're going to do it again for the upcoming Dec. 2nd Friday

Amanda Tucker, co-owner of E.N. (and my multi-talented step-daughter)

We had a run-in and huge argument with the custom car group that runs in downtown, during a 2nd Friday night when we had Bess the Book Bus in front of EN. We had reserved the parking spot for the charity book bus, but the car guys thought they should be able to park there anyway. One of the guys was named Buhba (represented in the hat here).

Evermore Nevermore Oven Mitt. We gave these out at our 1st day of business (Oct. 1st, 2009) and on our 1st anniversary (Oct. 1st, 2010). This is a gag linked to our family favorite movie, "The Jerk" - "You won a FREE oven-mitt!"

Severed arm with Z.E.D. (Zombie Extermination Division) Wrist band.

New Times Magazine that had our "Best of Phoenix" award for "Best Shopping on the Dark Side."